Appomattox Anti-Litter Campaign

"Let's have a bash - - - - -

Let's clean up our trash."

In Appomattox, Pamplin, and rural communities in the county —

Consider these:

1. Litter - - trash and junk - - is ugly.
2. Litter causes fire and endangers health.
3. Litter lowers property values.
4. Litter causes dangerous vehicle and personal accidents.
5. Litter provides a breeding place for rats, snakes, and harmful insects.
6. Litter hurts your friends and neighbors.
7. Littering is an expensive, bad habit we all need to break. It costs the state of Virginia, alone, up to $25 million yearly.

Mrs. Shirley Eye's 6th grade students attached 'working for a cleaner community' bags on desks....it was their own idea....also maintaining a keen awareness of the litter problem.

If your church, civic, or community organization is interested in joining the county clean-up campaign next week, contact one of the following:

Service-area reduction given okay by state WCB

By BILL SHERROD

Appomattox may build a wastewater-treatment system to serve an area smaller than that originally proposed by the federal Environmental Protection Agency, according to Town Manager Bill Britton.

Britton reported at a special meeting of the Mayor and Council Monday night that representatives of the state Water Control Board have agreed that the wastewater-treatment service area can be condensed to serve the corporate limits and a small area outside the town, rather than the wide region originally proposed by EPA.

He met with the Water Control Board Friday to discuss possible alternatives to the proposed regional facility.

The council has become concerned with the projected cost of a regional facility. Britton said Monday that a number of alternatives exist which would allow the town to build a less expensive treatment plant.

The two alternatives in which the councilmen expressed an interest involve upgrading and expanding the existing sewer system. One alternative would be to revamp the sewer treatment plant currently being used, and run an outfall line to Falling River.

The second alternative appealing to the council involves revitalizing the existing sewer treatment plant, and using it as a preliminary treatment system for an overland flow system located on Continental Can property south of town.

An added attraction of the overland flow system is that it would be eligible for 85 percent funding by the federal government, including construction costs and land-acquisition costs.

Upgrading the plant with an outfall line to the Falling River would be eligible for 75 percent federal funding.

In order for either of these alternatives to be enacted, however, the council must submit an addendum to the original EPA wastewater-treatment plan before June 1. Council members instructed consultants May-Hines, Inc., to submit a approximate cost figure to them as soon as possible so that a decision can be made as to which, if either, of the alternatives should be pursued.

Tax rate unchanged

County will build new jail facility

Appomattox County will have a new jail, following the Board of Supervisors' decision last Thursday to accept a construction bid for the project submitted by local firm J. E. Jamerson and sons.

The bid – for $415,800 – was the low offer submitted when five bids were opened May 9. The supervisors decided to opt for two alternate construction plans which will lower the cost to $414,650.

Board Chairman, Dr. S. R. Lawson, said he would like to "reduce the cost another $20,000," as well. He instructed representatives from consulting engineers architects Garland M. Gay to negotiate with the contractors for a lower total cost.

While bids for financing the construction were opened at the meeting, Commonwealth's Attorney Sam Kerr told the supervisors that, by law, any money borrowed to fund construction of the jail would have to be repaid within a year.

The supervisors noted that a $337,000 surplus in this year's budget, combined with a $25,000 grant from the state Department of Corrections, would make it possible for the county to borrow money it could repay within a year.

In a related matter, the supervisors set the tax rate for the coming year, reflecting no change from last year.

The rate will be 60 cents per $100 of assessed value on real estate and $3.50 per $100 of assessed value on personal property.

In other business, Kerr clarified a question regarding the county's dog confinement ordinance. Kerr noted that as written the ordinance does not prohibit a dog from being untied during the period between May 15 and June 15, as long as the dog remains within the confines of his owner's property. However, if the dog, leaves his owner's property, he can be picked up by the animal warden.

The supervisors also approved a suggestion by Kerr to allow Charles Thomas Moses, III to revamp the county code, getting changes and laterations in order.

Kerr noted that Moses, a law student at Washington and Lee University, is willing to do the work for a small amount of compensation and the experience.

It would be a costly venture if a professional firm did the work, according to Kerr.

Charges set against trucker

Charges of reckless driving, involuntary manslaughter, failure to possess a chauffer's license and improper display of FCC license were leveled against the driver of a tractor-trailer which hit a school bus in Appomattox County last week, police say.

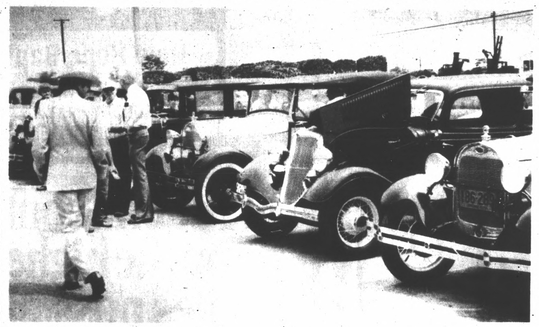
Gordon W. Wallen, 25, was released on $5,000 property bond following the charges, according to police. He was the driver of the truck which hit an Appomattox County public school bus on Route 460 west near Spout Spring May 12.

One student, Pamela Dawn Fuller, died as a result of injuries received in the crash.

Another student, Gregory Allen, was seriously injured in the accident.

The Allen boy is recovering "as well as can be expected," his father, Eldridge Allen, said Tuesday.

Wallen is scheduled to appear before the Appomattox General District Court July 16.



68 VEHICLES WERE REGISTERED for judging in the antique, specialty and classic auto show held this weekend at Lawson Ford in Appomattox. A large crowd turned out to view the festivities. For a list of winners in the competition, see page four inside.

Cleanup effort continues here

The Appomattox County Cleanup Campaign is in full swing, according to chairmen of the campaign's various committees.

Bill Caldwell, chairman of the cleanup committee, said this week that numerous areas in the county have already been purged of litter. He added that a number of civic groups are planning to launch cleanup efforts over the weekend.

Bill Britton, chairman of the communications committee, reminded citizens in the town of Appomattox this week that a town trash truck is available for those wishing to have collected trash removed.

In addition, Britton noted that anyone in the county wishing to have a junked automobile removed should contact Francis Tyler. His phone number is 352-7328. The number was incorrectly printed in last week's edition of the Times-Virginian.

Groups and individuals wishing to participate in the cleanup effort should contact the appropriate liasion person in their area. Those contact persons are Bill Caldwell (Clover Hill District, 352-8183), Francis Tyler (Stonewall District, 352-7328), and Carolyn Thompson (Southside District, 352-7304).

Shirley Walton, VPI&SU extension agent and coordinator of the cleanup effort, said last week that the trash pickup is only the start of an ongoing program intended to educate people as to the evils of littering.

She noted that steps have been taken in the schools, initiated by education committee chairman Shirley Eye, to teach children that littering is expensive as well as harmful to personal health and safety.

Other educational steps have included media proliferation of information regarding the litter problem, placement of posters in strategic areas throughout the county, and placement of anti-litter flyers in church bulletins throughout the county.

We need a major effort to find some "good news." Of late we have been peppered with "bad news. Natural disasters, human violence and unsolved world problems leave many bewildered, puzzled and perplexed. It is a field day for those who "view with alarm." But by nature I am an optimist and submit that there is plenty of "good news" if you seek it out or even if you look around you with an unprejudiced eye. From my typewriter desk I feast my eyes upon a mock orange in full bloom.

Glorious full bloom. And four crape myrtles in bud. A bushhog has cleared the unused portion of my lot, my garden is plowed, my lawnmower is working and there are moments when I feel that I am gaining the upperhand over creeping honeysuckle. Saturday seemed a likely day so I set out tomato plants and a some peppers. This morning a head count showed all is well. Planted onion sets and lots of sunflowers. Next, maybe this afternoon, glad bulbs. Then gourds and the usual garden food producers, save that watermelon data is classified information.

* * *

Ah yes, and in the "good news" department, the ACHS girls softball team had a wonderful season. Record: twenty wins to a single loss. Take a bow.

* * *

It is always "good news" to be visited by friends and Appomattox is fortunate to have lots of people who care. I feel honored when a friend drops by Martha Street for a chat. To be lonely is like trying to pitch horseshoes without taking the shoes off the horse.

Even in a busy Spring, one should find time to read something worthwhile. I have just finished a short study of St. Jude Thaddeus, the Patron Saint of Difficult Cases. His book is the shortest in the New Testament and I wish he might have written more. And then I am midway reading the famous Autobiography of Benjamin Franklin. Surely, any list of our greatest men would find Franklin near the top. My copy of this book belonged to my late mother. 288 pages. I infer that libraries, even in schools, were sparse around the turn of the century, and the rule was individual ownership of books. Heavens to Betsy, Ben Franklin was such a versatile man. A major inventor and scientist, one of our greatest diplomats, world traveler, publisher, patriot, and an inspiration to young and old.

Lots of thought will be given to travel this season, due to gas supplies, inflation. Many in this area have to choose between the mountains or seacoast. Either is an excellent selection. Virginia Beach ranks high. On the Eastern Shore, the annual Pony Penning and Firemen's Carnival at Chincoteague is set for July 30, 31, with the carnival extending to August 26. And the outdoor drama, "The Lost Colony" runs June 13 through August 30, at Manteo, on the Outer Banks of North Carolina. The Outer Banks offers 75 miles of coastal attractions and accomodations, from Kitty Hawk to Ocracoke.

Many local travelers will plan a trip to Colonial Williamsburg and the countless visitor centers around the Old Dominion. We hope many will stop by Historic Appomattox. Wrap-up...plenty of "Good News". Thanks for reading and seeya around.

Town office will be closed Monday

The Appomattox town office will be closed Monday, May 26, for the Memorial Day holiday. The town trash pickup will go on as scheduled, however.

The office will reopen Tuesday.

Trash-disposal regulation clarified in Appomattox

Several county residents have questioned the meaning of the ordinance regulating trash disposal, according to Supervisor J. Franklin Vaughan.

The section dealing with solid waste states: "It shall be unlawful to burn, bury, destroy or otherwise dispose of garbage, within the limits of the county except at the county-approved solid waste disposal site or sites; or at those sites and containers so approved by the county and permitted by the health department, bureau of solid waste and vector control.

"Rubbish may be disposed of on private land by the owner thereof or by others who have written permission of the landowner so long as the place of disposal does not become a public nuisance or create a hazard to health."
